Hemophilia of Georgia

Hemophilia of Georgia exists so that people in Georgia affected by bleeding disorders live as normally and productively as possible.

Hemophilia is a hereditary genetic disorder in which a person's blood cannot clot normally. In normal blood, proteins called clotting factors work together to form a clot whenever bleeding occurs. A person with hemophilia lacks or doesn't have enough of a certain clotting factor so the blood can't make a clot.

Hemophilia is a very rare disorder, affecting about 17,000 people in the United States. People who have hemophilia stop bleeding by taking an injection of the clotting factor that is missing from their blood. However, the clotting factor used to treat hemophilia is very expensive. Some patients reach their lifetime insurance maximum at very young ages.
